

JUMP RACE DISTANCES WITH EFFECT FROM JUNE 1st 2015

The British Horseracing Authority (BHA), in conjunction with the Racecourse Association (RCA), has published the results of a project which has concluded with the introduction of a new methodology for the measurement of Jump race distances. Jump races were previously measured along the mid-point of the course using a surveyors wheel, but under the agreed new methodology are now measured along a line 2yds off the innermost running rail position and professionally surveyed to the nearest yard. This methodology reflects that already used to measure Flat race distances.

The result is that, as of the implementation date of 1 June 2015, all Jump race distances will be advertised using both the traditional description - rounded to the nearest half furlong - alongside a new, exact 'baseline' distance, described to the exact yardage. Alterations to the race distance via rail movements will also be published on the Racing Admin site and the 'Fixture Updates' page on britishhorseracing.com.

The change in methodology means that, in many cases, race distance descriptions will be shorter when compared to the old system of measurement. This is not to say that all races have previously been incorrectly advertised, rather that the new methodology used to measure Jump races, using an inner line rather than middle of the track naturally leads to race descriptions being shorter.

In light of the new measuring system some racecourses have amended race distances or will move starts to reflect advertised race distances.

Rule (F)41.4 requires the minimum distance of a Hurdle/Chase race to be no less than two miles. Until now, on the old methodology, courses that measure at least 1m 7f and 166yds satisfy this requirement as they are rounded to the nearest half furlong. Under the new methodology there are 11 courses with a minimum trip whose description is slightly less than two miles. All options for repositioning the starts in question have been explored, however where that hasn't been possible, the racecourses in question have been granted dispensation from this Rule on the basis that the historical use of the start has been approved.

The full list of Jump race distance alterations and start movements are as follows:
